iPad Mock-ups

Introduction
These mock-ups are for the iPad Air version of the note taking application.

The focus for these mock-ups were tasks related to listening to recordings, taking notes and reviewing notes.

The goal was to explore and experiment with different design ideas and interaction methods some of which will be developed furter during the prototype project.

They were designed for an iPad Air but should work for the small iPad or other tablets.

Overall usage
I seee users using the iPad version to take notes and review notes taken via the web site or iPhone applicaiton. I don't see many users actually creating recordigns on their iPad

I see users, using the web site to upload their source material for conversion, then using hte iPhone and iPad applicaitons to consume the recordings and take notes.

Ideally all notes and recordings would be kept synced between a users iPhone, iPad and the web site.

Reflections and Insights
==========
1. Extra screen space a design challenge
I have spent a lot of time studing mobile design for smart phones. I have beenusing and iPad since version 1. Butt it was still a struggle to get my head around how best to design for the iPad.

I spent a lot of time trying to determine how best to group the features of the application given the extra space while still keeping into account the mobile nature of how the applicaiton could be used.

The final design might be a little to dense with to many featrues on each screen but I do think it is a start and should be user tested via a usability test.

2. Player controls
I am very happy with the player controls I designed for the iPhone version. But feel that the controls while funcational for the iPad version could use some more thought, reflection and user testing to determien how best to design them.

3. Note taking on a larger screen
After spending time designing this version, I feel that the larger screen will really aid users when taking notes. It should also make it easier to review ntoes.. As it allows for more information to be placed on the screen at one time and provides a much larger keyboard.
